LETTER TO ALUMNI

AUTUMN 1996

The hallmark of a great law school is its faculty. Faculty members through their teaching and research endeavors serve as the chief guardians of the ultimate quality of the academic program. It is the faculty who provide the creative energy and talent behind a curriculum that affords Hastings students the knowledge, skills, and judgment they need to be effective lawyers. Further, the faculty through their scholarship influence the development of legal doctrine and public policy, impacting the profession and the broader community on both the local and national level. The greatness and distinction of a school's faculty serve as an assurance that the school offers to its students a first-rate education and that its alumni have had the benefit of a special opportunity to learn from some of the leaders in the profession.

At Hastings, this point is dramatically underscored in our history when Dean Snodgrass instituted the 65 Club. The 65 Club faculty brought to the College the giants of the legal education world—giants such as Prosser, Powell, Perkins, Simes, and Hall—and skyrocketed Hastings into fame as a school of national distinction and stature. Few schools have such an opportunity to change their character and stature so rapidly. But even more important, the strength and reputation that Hastings has achieved with those great faculty additions have continued through the years. Our faculty reputation also has broadened by the addition of new and younger faculty whose promise of greatness was seen by our senior colleagues and who have fulfilled that promise. Today, we can look at our non-65 Club faculty with pride as they have assumed leadership positions in their respective fields—and they have done so even before they reach the age of 65! And the tradition continues, as the faculty each year evaluates new and promising teachers as possible additions to its ranks.

Each of the past issues of the Hastings Community includes a Faculty Notes section in which a few of the highlights of some achievements of my colleagues are included. Each fall we also have included pieces describing the newest additions to the faculty—individuals whose credentials on their face explain why we are so excited to have them join us. But these brief items cannot fully capture the strengths, dedication, energy, talent, and contributions of your faculty. I really want you to know more so that you can share in the pride and excitement that I feel in being part of the Hastings faculty, not just because of its lustrous history, but because of its continuing achievements today.

As a beginning, in this issue I asked the editors to include a special section listing the faculty's published scholarship and public speaking activities for the past two years, 1994-96. Although the faculty also engages in a wide array of additional public service endeavors, this listing is my attempt to allow you to appreciate the breadth and significance of the scholarly contributions of our faculty. Whether writing casebooks used in classrooms across the country, or reports for law revision bodies, or articles on cutting-edge legal issues that are cited by courts and other scholars for their insights, our faculty embodies the highest scholarly ideals. The number and array of their speaking engagements also evidences the prestige that their contributions have brought to the College; Hastings faculty members are asked to speak and to share their ideas with audiences around the nation.

But a slight problem arose in implementing even this modest effort to share with you the faculty's scholarly activities. When the list was finally compiled, I was advised that it filled 28 pages! Too much for us to print or to expect you to read. There simply is no way to easily and quickly fill you in on all the contributions of your faculty. Thus, we have limited this listing to only 1995-96 and have had to excise some of the details about numerous public speaking engagements. I encourage you to review what remains and to realize that it presents only a snapshot of all that is going on. But it is a snapshot that I hope will capture your attention and will encourage and excite you to continue to take pride in Hastings and to tell others about the marvelous faculty that is at its core.

Sincerely,

Mary Kay Kane

Idealism Lives!

BY MICHEL LIPMAN ('37)

It hasn't been too many years since law school graduates could choose which prestigious law firm they could work for to earn $50,000 to $60,000 a year.

Not any more. But even in those rosier times, a very impressive number of new Hastings lawyers did not make a bee-line for the suites of their affluent colleagues. Rather, they wanted to use their skills in another great tradition of the legal profession: to help the poor, the oppressed, and the needy. They were motivated to work for legal aid offices, prosecutorial or defense offices, Native Americans, children, seniors with problems, the military, and victims.

In the by-gone '80s, with no substantial debts, the new grad could manage a trade-off between the desired job and the less bountiful remuneration. Not so today. Educational costs are up. So is the cost of food and shelter. Result: more students need the help of student loans that may easily run to $25,000 and often considerably higher. So how can you work at a soul-satisfying job that needs you desperately, but can only pay you what an urban legal secretary or paralegal earns? Or less?

Hastings recognized the problem. "If only it were possible to cancel out most of that debt load," our Board of Directors said in effect. "Then the public interest employer and the would-be employee would mutually benefit. Both would be happy, and the public would be served."

So the Board set up the Public Interest Career Assistance Program (PICAP), which began dispensing funds in 1991. PICAP's provisions say, in substance, "If you want to work for a qualifying public interest firm, do so, and we'll pick up most of your loan payments." Certain restrictions, as the airlines say, apply.

HOW IT WORKS

The applicant must, first of all, have taken a job with a qualifying public interest office. Each application must show the person's income, proof of employment, list of educational debts and amounts, and other relevant data, including a signed agreement to report any income increase.

Loan assistance is computed on a sliding scale. If the attorney is earning less than $25,000, for example, he or she may, at the end of the first year (ending in December), receive a check for 90% of loan payments made. The percentage increases each year, to 100% in the sixth year.

QUALITY GRADUATES

One might think that graduates with the highest grades would opt for the highest-paying jobs. Not necessarily so. The Hastings administration has been gratified to find that many top graduates are strongly motivated to take their skills to these lower-paying jobs.

The alumni may well be proud that, in our cynical age, such idealism persists among young people. Consider, for example, CHARLES STEAK ('90).

WHAT THEY SAY

Gold Beach, Oregon, is a small town at the edge of the Pacific Ocean. It's in Curry County, and the population is about 20,000. That is where Mr. Steak joined the District Attorney's Office. Early in his career, he had worked with police officers involving Berkeley's Housing Authority. He quickly learned to appreciate the arduous work that officers perform. And that inspired him to go into law enforcement work. After completing his studies at Hastings and passing the California bar, he said, "I then took the Oregon bar, passed, and applied to every D.A.'s office on the coast. Curry County was interested—and here I am!"

But his dream job might not have been possible without Hastings' Public Interest Career Assistance Program. "Having them pick up the bulk of my payments made the difference," he says. "I'm most grateful for the help they have given me over these financially difficult years."

Mr. Steak's main problem in considering the job in the first place was the beginning salary: $27,000. He had two student loans to meet, costing nearly $18,000, used mostly for food and rent while at Hastings. One loan required monthly payments of $206, the other $159 every three months. That doesn't leave much on which to live. However, if he stays with the job, PICAP will pick up most of his loan balance. The result, as a reward for going into public interest practice, is that he won't have to repay any of the debt that PICAP pays.

One of many other such examples is JENNIFER VAN DER HEIDE ('92), who came to Hastings from Minneapolis. She brought with her a burning ambition to practice public interest law. California Indian Legal Services gave her the opportunity to represent indigent Native Americans and counsel tribal governments. She, too, had student loans outstanding which, when consolidated, came to about $175,000, payable over 30 years, including interest. Out of her gross monthly earnings of $3,000 she repays $450 a month. Now that her application has been approved by PICAP, a substantial part of those payments will be remitted back to her.

"It's a wonderful feeling," she says. "I'm most grateful to Hastings for its marvelous support of those committed to practicing public interest law!"

LURE OF PUBLIC SERVICE

Where does this kind of dedication come from? Do professors and instructors instill it in their students? Perhaps, to a degree. But Angèle Khachadour, Hastings' General Counsel, believes the dedication comes in part long before students come to their legal studies. "We see first-year students speak of public interest," she says. "Even in college, we see them being drawn into public interest projects." So that area of practice seems to attract people from all levels and groups.

The Road to Hope... Bob, That Is

BY JUDY LANE

The next time someone asks if you know any good lawyer jokes, tell them this one. You see there was this attorney who was bored with the legal profession. Just so happens he's got a bent for humor. Instead of writing briefs, he starts cranking out gags and bada bing, bada bang, he ends up as staff writer for Bob Hope for 15 years. The punch line? This time, the laugh isn't on the lawyer.

For Hastings alumnus BOB MILLS ('65), life with the Bob Hope troupe was the stuff that dreams are made of. He and his wife Shelley traveled all over the world, staying at luxurious hotels and eating the finest food. But, Mills will be the first to tell you, humor is serious business.

"One of the drawbacks of the job was that I was on call 24 hours a day. Bob [Hope] was notorious for calling writers at all hours, from somewhere overseas, asking for a couple of gags on Paraguay or the weather in Rome, GI food, this sort of thing. Our writing team toured with him all over the world, which eliminated the middle-of-the-morning phone calls, but made it easier for him to call us to his room at 11:30 p.m. to discuss a gag. He still expected us to be up again at 6:00 the next morning to write stuff for an 8:00 a.m. show," Mills said.

For Mills, the Road to Hope was anything but a straight line—ahem.

It was the summer of 1954, when Mills, who was 16 at the time, first met Bob Hope—he and hundreds of other fans clamoring to get a glimpse of their favorite celebrity. Hope was at the Emporium in San Francisco promoting his recently published book, Have Tux, Will Travel. An author's table and stacks of his book were set up for Hope to autograph. Always the funnyman himself, Mills grabbed a copy of Bing Crosby's autobiography, Call Me Lucky, before leaving the house that day. When he finally reached the front of the line, he handed it to Hope.

Bob Hope with Bob Mills ('65).

"Hi, Bob," he said. "I can't afford your book, but will this do?"

Hope looked at the worn paperback, held it up for the others in line to see, and then flung it into the housewares department. As usual, he brought the house down.

"I had thought up my first joke for Bob Hope—a visual that had produced a spontaneous, legitimate laugh," Mills remembered.

Born and raised in San Francisco, Mills, as you might expect, was the class clown in both grammar and high school. However, like most young men of his generation, he opted for the more "sensible path to success." He earned a BA in Sociology from San Francisco State University in 1962 and a JD from Hastings in 1965. He practiced law in Palo Alto for the next ten years—albeit unhappily.

"I was a general practitioner, mostly business law. The only thing I enjoyed about my work was the old Victorian we were housed in. I had my own room with a shower and everything. For a bachelor, this came in really handy some mornings," Mills chuckled.

His boredom gave way to creativity. He began writing—everything. He even wrote confession stories for women's magazines. Then, an article by Carol Burnett writer Gene Perret in Writer's Digest magazine changed everything for Mills.

"What stuck in my mind was Perret's suggestion that one way a writer could get started was to submit his material to a local performer. That's exactly what I did."

He began sending gags to KSFO DJ Don Sherwood, who enjoyed a huge morning following in the Bay Area. Sherwood used his material on a regular basis, making Mills a household name locally. A couple of his most popular pieces were a series of "You know it's gonna be one of those days when..." and his "Letters to Uncle Don" scripts.

Mills then sent a package of his jokes to Perret, whose response was, "You're terrific!" Little did he know then that he would later spend nine years with Perret on the Bob Hope staff. In the meantime, Perret became a trusted friend and mentor. At his urging, Mills and wife Shelley headed for Hollywood—much to the dismay of Mills' parents.

"You know how parents are. I'd lived at

Students' needs for loans have increased in recent years, due to rises in tuition and living expenses. And the first year of law school is the toughest, financially, since part-time employment during that year is discouraged. So it's not surprising that substantial numbers need loans to help them through. Even with family help or private means, today's legal education carries a $100,000-plus price tag.

"Basically," says Khachadour, "the PICAP program provides options for new graduates. Even though the job market is tight right now, I believe this is only a temporary situation. Job placement will improve, and we want to preserve the choice for students who are really dedicated to public interest practice."

"I'm proud to say that Hastings was one of the first schools to develop such a program. We have had many other schools ask us for details and information for setting up a similar aid program. And it's very heartening to hear from those we have helped, who tell us of their appreciation."

POWER OF THE SPIRIT...

"The popular image of young lawyers today seems to be that they cannot wait to join the BMW-country-club crowd. From my experience with the students at Hastings, I'd say it is quite the contrary. Many appear truly dedicated to our centuries-old traditions. They seem willing to fight for the ideals and principles of justice with little regard for their personal benefit. This quietly powerful spirit is a spirit in which all of us at Hastings College of the Law may take the greatest of pride."

—Dean Mary Kay Kane

home all through law school; they supported me. And to them, doctors and lawyers are like gods. So, when I told them, 'Oh, by the way, we're selling the house, I'm leaving my practice, and I'm going to Los Angeles to write comedy,' they went, 'You're doing WHAT?!!!!'"

Perret helped Mills land his first television job on the staff of "Dinah!," a daily, syndicated one-hour talk show hosted by Dinah Shore.

"It was like going to television college. I learned more on that show about the ins and outs of television than I could have ever picked up in years of study. And, I got paid for it!" he exclaimed.

Mills was then hired as a staff writer for the Dean Martin celebrity roasts. Within two years, Hope hired Mills as a full-time comedy writer. For the next fifteen years, he wrote television scripts, magazine articles, commencement speeches, celebrity eulogies, and an estimated 50,000 jokes, all of which he still has boxed in his garage.

"Hope is a really great guy. He always treated his writers with the utmost respect and acknowledged our contributions publicly. He understood that people were sophisticated enough to realize that comedians don't just stand up there and make it up. Why kid anybody?"

Mills credits his experience at Hastings for teaching him discipline, "a skill that has held me in good stead over the years in the TV biz where deadlines are so important." His fondest memories of Hastings involve the 65 Club: In particular, Professors Snodgrass, Sammis, Goble, Prosser, and MacLachlan.

"God rest their souls—great men who tried to pass some of it on to schmucks like us. My fellow students were great, too. Happy to help one another get through—strong camaraderie," Mills said.

Mills currently writes humor books and videos and is a regular contributor to the Los Angeles Times' "Laugh Lines" daily joke column. In addition, he has just completed a book on life with Bob Hope entitled, You Call This Funny? Inside Bob Hope's Comedy Factory, which is being marketed by the Doris Michaels Literary Agency in New York.

To prove he could take it as well as dish it, Mills shares a story about waiting with Hope for a cab on a street corner in Cleveland.

"I had on my favorite piece of clothing: an Yves St. Laurent leather jacket, with flap pockets, a cord coming down the side, the whole thing. I was feeling pretty sharp. He looked me up and down and said, 'You look like a Hungarian Freedom Fighter.'"

Mills lives with his wife, Shelley, and a variety of lost and abandoned cats and dogs in Studio City, California.

NEW FACULTY

DANIEL J. LATHROPE

This fall, Prof. Dan Lathrope returns to Hastings, following a year as the Director of the graduate tax program at the University of Florida. He first joined the Hastings faculty in 1980 and previously served as Dean at Hastings for the 1987-88 academic year and as Academic Dean from 1988 to 1990. He also has taught at New York University and at Leiden University in the Netherlands.

Prof. Lathrope grew up in Indiana and the East Bay. He received his undergraduate degree at the University of Denver, his JD at Northwestern University (Order of the Coif, Law Review), and an LL.M. in Taxation at New York University. He practiced law in Phoenix, Arizona.

Prof. Lathrope is co-author with Lind, Schwarz, and Rosenberg of Fundamentals of Corporate Taxation and Fundamentals of Partnership Taxation, and is the sole author of a treatise on the alternative minimum tax. He teaches courses in Taxation and Sports Law.

REUEL E. SCHILLER

Reuel Schiller was born in New York City and raised in Brooklyn, New York. He received his BA in History from Yale University in 1988.

After college, he worked for the City of New York on immigration, criminal justice, and education issues. He received his JD from the University of Virginia, where he served on the Virginia Law Review and was elected to Order of the Coif. Prof. Schiller is currently a candidate for a Ph.D. in American History from the University of Virginia, where he received a Master's degree in that subject. He is finishing his dissertation on the relationship between judicial decision-making and changes in political culture during the New Deal and the post-World War II period.

After graduating from law school, Prof. Schiller clerked for Judge J. Frederick Motz of the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. He was a Samuel I. Golieb Fellow in Legal History at New York University School of Law and a Louis Prashker Teaching Fellow at St. John's University School of Law. Prof. Schiller's main areas of academic interest are American Legal History, Administrative Law, Labor Law, and Constitutional Law.

WILLIAM W. SCHWARZER

The Hon. William W. Schwarzer was appointed to the bench in 1976 and is a Senior U.S. District Judge for the Northern District of California. Prior to his appointment, he was a partner in the San Francisco law firm of McCutchen, Doyle, Brown & Enersen. From 1990 until 1995, he served as Director of the Federal Judicial Center in Washington, D. C. and now joins the Hastings faculty as a Distinguished Professor of Law.

Judge Schwarzer received his AB and LL.B. degrees cum laude from the University of Southern California and Harvard University, respectively. He was a Teaching Fellow at Harvard Law School from 1951-52. He has been a frequent lecturer and panel member at judicial training and CLE programs, a member of the faculty at the Salzburg Seminar, a moderator at the Aspen Institute's Justice and Society Seminar, and an adjunct professor at Georgetown University Law Center.

Judge Schwarzer served as Chairman of the U.S. Judicial Conference Committee on Federal-State Jurisdiction and as a member of the American Law Institute's Advisory Committee on Complex Litigation. He is a Judicial Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers and the recipient of its Samuel E. Gates Litigation Award. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and of the advisory board of the American Bar Association's Central and East European Law Initiative.

Judge Schwarzer is the author of Managing Antitrust and Other Complex Litigation and co-author of the Rutter Group's Federal Practice Guide, as well as Civil Discovery and Mandatory Disclosure. He also has authored numerous articles on a variety of subjects relating to the federal courts and the administration of justice.

HASTINGS STUDENT SAVES BAY BRIDGE SUICIDE JUMPER

Dennis Tison thought he'd spotted a seal bobbing in the Bay. It was dusk, December 27, 1995, and the second-year Hastings student, who is also a psychiatrist and triathlon participant, was rowing alone, unwinding after finals. He was looking forward to a quiet week with his girl friend Elena I. Bravo ('96). What he saw turned out to be not a seal, after all, but a man who had just attempted suicide. Thanks to quick thinking, and an amazing degree of preparedness on Tison's part, 23-year old Hamel Manfor Popal became the first person ever to survive a jump off the Bay Bridge. And Dennis Tison's dream of a quiet week evaporated.

Anyone who watched television news, the "Today Show," or read the nation's newspapers or news magazines in the weeks that followed should be familiar with the rescue. When he spoke with the Community three weeks after the event, Tison said, "I think the media had been looking for a feel-good Christmas story, and this was it!"

As he had so many times before on television and in print, Tison described how he questioned the man and determined what had just happened. He was aware, from his medical training, that he could aggravate potential back injuries by attempting to lift Popal, so, instead, he tossed him a lifejacket and called the Coast Guard on a cellular phone he just happened to have brought along in the rowboat.

The Coast Guard appeared in minutes to hoist Popal out of the Bay. The jumper and his family thanked Tison following the rescue as Popal recovered in the hospital from back injuries. Popal claimed that his jump was a spur-of-the-moment act, the result of a quarrel with his girl friend, and he was clearly glad to have survived.

That day, Tison had a camera handy in the row boat, too, along with the extra life jacket and cellular phone. His dramatic photograph of the rescue, with a classic shot of San Francisco in the background, has appeared in many publications. Tison notes that the photograph shows the Coast Guard lifting Popal up by grabbing him under his arms, a move, Tison says, they made even though he signaled them not to do it (because it might aggravate potential spinal injuries). Despite this concern, Tison says he is not going into personal injury law. He plans to incorporate his legal training into his psychiatric career and become a forensic psychiatrist, perhaps working with serial killers and as an expert witness. He says he chose to attend Hastings because of its reputation for academic excellence. He also appreciates its location by the Bay, where, as a member of the Dolphin Club, he swims and rows frequently.

Tison's heroism has brought rewards. Mayor Willie L. Brown, Jr. ('58) presented him with an Outstanding Citizen's Award, CNN chose him as their Sports Pick of the Week (the rescue took place in a row boat), and the cellular phone industry honored him with their Vita Award, an award presented yearly for saving a life through the use of a wireless communication, at a ceremony in Washington, D.C., on May 8, 1996.

HASTINGS WINS AWARD FROM GOVERNOR FOR EMPLOYMENT OF OLDER WORKERS

Hastings has received the first-ever Governor's Sustained Excellence Award for Employment of Older Workers. The California Task Force for the Employment of Older Workers recommended that Gov. Pete Wilson grant the award based on the College's pioneering efforts in improving employment opportunities for post-retirement age professors. The 65 Club, which was begun by Dean David Snodgrass in 1940, was a highly visible success and served to demonstrate to the nation the productivity and worth of older workers. Because of this, other institutions began to question the wisdom of their forced retirement practices. In addition, information provided to the U.S. Senate about Hastings' 65 Club assisted in the passage of legislation ending mandatory retirement laws.

Today, the quality of Hastings' faculty is unparalleled, and Hastings continues to attract world-renowned scholars, the top leaders in their field, building upon the tradition of excellence that began with the 65 Club. And, today, there are law professors of traditional post-retirement age who prefer to move to a more pleasant climate and join the Hastings faculty, but, thanks to Hastings' efforts, now they do so out of choice, not because their employer doesn't want them because of age.

Academic Dean Leo Martinez accepted the award on behalf of the College at a ceremony in Sacramento in May.

Smoley, R.N., Secretary for the State of California Health and Welfare Agency (right), present Academic Dean Leo Martinez with the Governor's Sustained Excellence Award to honor the College for the 65 Club's leadership role in helping the nation recognize the worth of older workers.

HOLLYWOOD COMES TO HASTINGS

For one week in April, parts of Hastings' McAllister Tower were transformed into movie sets for a film starring Eddie Murphy. Metro, a Caravan Pictures production, directed by Thomas Carter, is due for distribution by Touchstone Pictures during the first half of 1997.

Set designers transformed the lobby of the Tower into an urban hospital's reception room. One scene required a stunt man to simulate a fall from one of the building's roofs. Crowds gathered below to watch his 14-story plunge onto a two-story air mattress, placed out of camera range on Leavenworth Street.

Development Notes

MAJOR GIFTS RECEIVED BY THE COLLEGE

Dean Mary Kay Kane announced that the College recently received two major gifts. Annette Dobbs contributed $50,000 to establish an endowment for the Harold S. Dobbs Intermural Moot Court Competition Fund in honor of her late husband, who graduated from Hastings in 1942 and was a former Chair of the Hastings Board of Directors. In addition, the Honorable Annette La Rue ('52) donated $25,000 to establish an endowment for a scholarship fund for the benefit of Hastings' female law students. Dean Kane noted that the very generous gifts of Mrs. Dobbs and Judge La Rue could not have come at a more propitious time. "The Harold S. Dobbs Intermural Moot Court Competition Fund will help defray the travel costs and other related expenses incurred by Hastings students participating in various intermural moot court competitions throughout the state and the nation. This newly endowed fund is being made available at a time when our students are participating in a greater number of moot court competitions than ever before—and winning them, too! I'm most pleased that Harold Dobbs, who always wanted Hastings to be at the top on so many fronts, will now have his name permanently identified with an area where our students are experiencing such great success."

Judge Annette La Rue ('52) chatted with Dean Mary Kay Kane after establishing a scholarship fund for the benefit of Hastings' female law students.

Dean Kane went on to observe that the Annette La Rue Scholarship Fund could not be more welcome, particularly in light of the fact that tuition and law school fees have skyrocketed by over 300% during just the past couple of years. The scholarship will be especially appreciated by each future award recipient because it is intended to go to "a female law student in her second or third year who has shown promise as a future lawyer and who also has demonstrated financial need by working to help defray her expenses while attending Hastings."

"Like Annette Dobbs," Dean Kane continued, "Judge La Rue cannot be complimented enough for having established an endowment that will permanently benefit Hastings students. Such great generosity makes it possible for Hastings to maintain its standing as one of the nation's leading law schools and to continue to be able to attract the finest students."

MAJOR GIFT TECHNIQUES & THEIR ADVANTAGES

Donors who wish to make gifts to the College can do so outright—like Annette Dobbs and Judge La Rue did—or they can structure contributions in the form of a special category of gifts, which often are referred to as deferred gifts, planned gifts, or life-income gifts. Such gifts allow you to:

- ✓ Provide a secure income for life for yourself and for your loved ones;
- ✓ Receive an immediate charitable income tax deduction;
- ✓ Eliminate or reduce your capital gains tax liability;
- ✓ Eliminate or reduce estate taxes; and
- ✓ Realize the personal satisfaction that comes from knowing you have added to the quality of Hastings when you designate the future use of the remaining gift proceeds for purposes you believe are the most important for the College.

Simply stated, planned giving works as follows: you make a gift of cash, securities, or real property to the law school. (Gifts of property typically are sold shortly after they are received, and the proceeds, along with any accompanying gifts of cash, are reinvested.) In return for your gift, you, or others named by you, receive income for life or for a fixed term. Upon the death of the last surviving beneficiary or the expiration of a specific period of time, the law school receives the remaining funds.

In addition to increasing your deductions, deferred gifts also may help you avoid or delay capital gains taxes, while increasing your spendable income. Neither the transfer of appreciated assets to the planned-giving vehicle nor the subsequent sale of those assets triggers a capital gains tax. Thus, you can convert a previously unproductive asset into an income-yielding one, while avoiding the imposition of capital gains taxes on the transfer and sale of the underlying asset.

If we can provide assistance with gift planning, please do not hesitate to contact the Dean or the Office of College Relations. Needless to say, all philanthropic gifts of significant value should be considered carefully in relation to the other requirements of your comprehensive financial and estate plan and should be executed with the advice of your own financial counselor.

Dobbs Intermural Moot Court Competition Fund* in honor of her late husband, who was a former Chair of the Hastings Board of Directors and a past recipient of the Hastings' Alumnus of the Year Award.

Hastings' Ninth Annual Scholarship Tea

These pictures show some of the many donors and recipients who attended the 1996 scholarship awards presentation on April 17. More than 180 students received scholarships and awards during the 1995-96 school year. In addition, the Hastings 1066 Foundation presented annual program grants.

June Schnacke visited with four recipients of the Judge Robert H. Schnacke Scholarships for judicial externs. Each recipient is working for a federal judge on the Northern District of California bench. Michael F. Cyran, Stephen M. Fronk, Annik T. Hirshen, Jonathan W. Hughes, and Jennifer S. Winn, all from the Class of 1996, received the scholarships.

Emil Kim ('98) (center) received the Wayne O. Veatch, Sr., Scholarship from Wayne O. Veatch, Jr. ('76) (left) and Academic Dean Leo Martinez ('78). The scholarship was established in honor of Wayne O. Veatch, Sr. ('35) to benefit a worthy and deserving first-year student, preferably from the greater Los Angeles area.

Academic Dean Leo Martinez ('78) presented Charlene A. Jimenez ('97) (left) and Sandra M. Kim ('96) with the Ingemar E. Hoberg Scholarship awards, which were established in memory of the Hastings alumnus and former Hastings board member.

(Left to right) Kristian D. Whitten, Foundation past President, and Jane A. Rummel, Foundation Trustee Emeritus, presented the Hastings 1066 Foundation Charles A. Rummel Memorial Scholarships to Adria I. Cheng ('97) and Scott B. Joachim ('97). The awards are given annually to second-year students, recognizing their academic achievement and commitment to the College.

Former President of the Hastings 1066 Foundation John K. "Jack" Smith ('54) (back, center) presented the Foundation's Scholarly Journalistic Prizes to the editors-in-chief of the six scholarly journals in recognition of their significant contributions to the intellectual life of the College. The Foundation also awarded special recognition certificates to members of each journal's editorial staff. All recipients were from the Class of 1996: (Left to right, first row) Ruth Burdick; Stacey Swatek-Huie; Jolene Yee; Dave Anderson; and Amy E. Scheffler; (Second row) Delia Poon; Todd E. Brody; Jack Smith; Christopher Hayes; and Kim Y. Arnone; (Third row) Herb Williams; Albert Kaba, coordinator for Scholarly Publications; Heidi Gewertz; and Elaine Fitch.

Prof. Ashutosh Bhagwat (left) received the Hastings 1066 Foundation Faculty Award, an annual grant to a faculty member who has shown a commitment to excellence in legal scholarship. John K. "Jack" Smith ('54), former President of the Hastings 1066 Foundation, presented the award.

Founder's Day 1996

The Louis B. Mayer Hall was filled to capacity on March 1, 1996, with an enthusiastic crowd that had come to celebrate the 118th anniversary of the founding of the College. Founder's Day events featured JOSEPH W. COTCHETT ('64), who was presented with the 1996 Alumnus of the Year Award at the alumni luncheon, and San Francisco Mayor WILLIE L. BROWN, JR. ('58), who served as both the luncheon speaker and, later in the afternoon, as the 1996 Marvin J. Anderson Lecturer.

THE ALUMNI LUNCHEON

Alumni Association President BRIAN D. THIESSEN ('67) presented Cotchett's award for his lifetime of service to others, the profession, and particularly to Hastings, where he served as a member of the Board of Directors for 12 years and as one of the College's most generous benefactors. Cotchett is a senior partner in the law firm of Cotchett & Pitre in Burlingame and, in his distinguished 30-year career, has been honored by virtually every national trial bar. His honors include fellowship in the prestigious American College of Trial Lawyers and designation as one of the "100 Most Influential Lawyers in America" by the National Law Journal. Recently, he was awarded the Anti-Defamation League's Distinguished Jurisprudence Award. He also is an accomplished author of several books, a lecturer, and a civic leader.

President Thiessen remarked that Cotchett was "successful in helping to place Hastings graduates. Some one-third of his firm members are Hastings alumni. In addition, he has been a tremendous financial contributor to our institution for projects like the Alumni Reception Center, the Attorneys General Forum, and the Class of 1964's major class gift project, and he also has played a leading role in several of our law school's major CLE programs, like the recent CLE program about the fundamentals of litigation that was nationally televised on the Court TV network."

Cotchett began his remarks by recognizing several people in the audience, including, among others, FREDERICK D. BUTLER ('86), President of the Black Alumni Chapter, the Hon. JACKIE SPEIER ('76) of the California State Assembly, the Hon. JOHN T. RACANELLI ('52) of the California Court of Appeal, and Robert Kane, former ambassador to Ireland and former Justice of the California Court of Appeal.

Teasing another person in the audience, his former law firm partner for 22 years, the Hon. Susan Illston, a graduate of Stanford, Cotchett said, "When we went to Hastings we had a Dean [Dean Snodgrass] who, on your first day, said, 'Look to your right, look to your left, one of you will be gone . . . The fact is that Stanford may keep you, but we won't.'"

In a more serious vein, Cotchett noted how proud he was to be a Hastings graduate, commenting, "We turn out lawyers who truly look to public service. When you look around at the Willie Browns and the Jackie Speiers, and you could name so many, when you look down that list and you look at the judges who have been honored, it is phenomenal to think that this little school, this 'country day school,' turns out the lawyers it does."

U.S. Representative Nancy Pelosi, whose daughter Christine graduated from Hastings in 1993, flew to San Francisco both to celebrate Cotchett's receipt of the Alumnus of the Year Award and to introduce Mayor Brown as the luncheon speaker.

Mayor Brown spoke about the need for attorneys to participate in public service. He stressed the importance of law school as preparation for this. Answering a question, he said, "I have chosen politics as a way in which I could best make a contribution to humankind. . . . This is a nation of laws, and there has to be great respect for those laws. It's important who helps to frame those laws. . . . If you really are interested in pursuing public service, a law degree, a legal education is, maybe, the single best instrument, the best foundation, for that purpose."

THE MARVIN J. ANDERSON LECTURE

The Marvin J. Anderson Lectureship program was established by the 1066 Foundation in 1990 to honor former Hastings Dean Marvin J. Anderson, who was in attendance at this year's Founder's Day celebration. The Lectureship is designed to bring distinguished legal scholars, jurists, and public servants to the campus to complement Hastings' existing programs.

As this year's Marvin Anderson Lecturer, Mayor Willie L. Brown, Jr., made his first appearance at Hastings since he assumed office as the Mayor of San Francisco. Among his outstanding achievements, he served as Speaker Emeritus of the California State Assembly from June 1995 to December 1995. This position capped a 14-1/2 year career as Speaker of the Assembly, making him the longest serving Speaker in the history of California. He was re-elected 16 straight times to the 13th Assembly District (D-San Francisco) and served as a member of the Assembly from 1964 to 1995. In addition, he was the youngest person in the history of the California Legislature to serve as Chair of the Committee on Ways and Means, from 1971 to 1974, as well as the only African-American to chair that office, ever. He has served as a Regent of the University of California from 1980 to 1995 and as a Trustee of California State University from 1980 to 1995. Mayor Brown received the College's Alumnus of the Year Award in 1986.

Following his introduction by the Hastings 1066 Foundation President VALERIE FONTAINE ('79), Mayor Brown recognized the Chair of the Hastings Board of Directors, JACK KNOX ('52), who was in the audience. Brown said, "The man who really taught me the legislative skills that I may have displayed while serving in the legislature was Jack Knox . . . I modeled my presiding officer technique, every aspect of my legislative career, in my debate on the floor, from what I learned from Jack Knox. That has stood me in good stead."

Brown's lecture centered upon First Amendment issues and how academic institutions provide the best environment to discuss those issues. He said:

NY Times v. Sullivan has elevated the protections that are afforded to the media that I think requires at least some discussion in an environment and with people who will not suffer as a result of those discussions. People holding elected office have a great fear of holding any dialogue with reference to the media simply because allegedly we live or die by what the media says—how we are portrayed, what kind of image

Hastings' Founder, Serranus Clinton Hastings, 1814-98, the first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California.

The Hon. Serranus Clinton Hastings' legacy to California was the founding of Hastings College of the Law, the first legal department of the University of California. California Gov. William Irwin signed the act creating Hastings College of the Law in March 1878.

"This College," Hastings said, "shall stand as long as government and civilized society shall stand . . . It shall be a monument, not of granite, wood, or marble, not a house made with hands, but a temple of law and intellect."

is projected for us. On many occasions, politicians actually cater to the media out of total and complete stark fear from being literally destroyed by that instrument.

So we will never, in my opinion, get any rational, reasonable, and practical discussion by the elected officials of this nation, and those who are supposed to be framing public policy, because they live in utter fear of their survival. . . . Term limits may free them to be a bit more objective, at least in their last term, or if they get as old as I am, to be objective or as indifferent as I am to the process. That dialogue has to take place [concerning these issues] in the halls of ivy, in the classrooms, in legal discussion forums. And it really ought to be revisited in a very serious and scholarly way.

A record-breaking crowd filled the Louis B. Mayer Hall on Founder's Day.

Hastings 1066 Foundation's 25th Anniversary Gala

The Hastings 1066 Foundation celebrated its 25th anniversary with a black tie gala at the Sheraton Palace Hotel in San Francisco on Founder's Day, March 1, 1996. Music of the Richard Olsen Orchestra was made possible by a contribution from Jack Smith ('54) and Cynthia Smith Birmingham ('83).

Founded in 1971, the Foundation is named after the historic battle of 1066 A.D., the Battle of Hastings, which changed the course of English history.

Foundation donors contribute gifts of $1066 or more each year. These gifts provide funding to support, among other things, Hastings moot court activities, scholarly publications, the Marvin J. Anderson Lectureship, and faculty teaching and research assistance. Additionally, special Foundation gifts have provided support for scholarships and the annual Attorneys General Forum. For more information, contact Foundation Director Suzanne Needles at 415-565-4621.

Faculty Publications & Speeches

JANUARY 1995 TO JUNE 1996

Through research and scholarship and the dissemination of new ideas, faculty members make major contributions to growth and change in our legal system. The involvement of faculty in cutting-edge areas of the law and as participants in major law reform efforts also enhances their ability to bring to the classroom a full understanding not only of what the law is but how it may be shaped for tomorrow. Thus, the scholarly activities of the faculty play an important role in maintaining Hastings as one of the leading law schools in the nation.

Hastings faculty members pursued a very active scholarly agenda during the period represented here, from January 1995 to June 1996. They authored numerous major books and articles and presented papers and speeches at conferences and meetings held around the United States and abroad. Space does not allow a full listing of all their activities.

Alum in the News Sharon D. Banks ('81)

As General Manager for AC Transit, Sharon Banks is one of the few women in the nation to head a regional bus line. She is responsible for managing 2,000 employees and a budget of $153 million. In the February 4, 1996, edition of the Vacaville Reporter, a profile summarizes her early life and previous careers as a speech pathologist and school counselor.

She was born in Cairo, Illinois. Her father was a Harlem Globe Trotter and her mother a domestic worker who later became a baker. They were divorced when Banks was a young child. Banks credits her mother for "scripting" her children for success. On the first day of elementary school, she recalls her mother saying, "It won't be long now until you have your Ph.D." Banks' mother died at age 53, leaving Banks, by then a school counselor, questioning the direction of her own life. A chance encounter with a Hastings third-year student, Claude Ames ('77), who accused her of "vegetating," led her to apply to Hastings.

"Going back to law school at 33 was the most exciting thing that God could have put in my life. I had gone to college and worked, gone to summer school and worked. This was the first time I had stopped working, to learn. It came at the perfect time for me. I enjoyed the Moot Court program, where my partner Michelle Kibbe Chairs ('81) and I earned Best Brief in the Snodgrass Competition, and I earned Best Brief in the Frederick Douglass Moot Court Competition. This was one of the highlights of my law school career. I also enjoyed clerking for the Court of Appeal."

During her third year, she interned in the legal department of the Oakland Unified School District, assisting with coordinating dealings with 13 labor units. She was hired by the district after graduation and later went to work for the Oakland City Attorney's office, focusing on labor law. In 1987, she went to work for a private firm, where AC Transit was one of her clients. Three years later, AC Transit hired her as their General Counsel. Eight months after that, she was asked by the Board of Directors to add the General Manager's duties to those of General Counsel, on an interim basis. She was offered the General Manager position in 1991. Currently she chairs the California Transit Association and is a member of the Executive Committee of the National Academy of Sciences' Transportation Research Board.

She says she loves her work. "It's phenomenal to see the degree to which the people in the transit industry are dedicated to providing a much-needed service. I have not seen that kind of loyalty to delivery of services in any other industry. This dedication is what makes my job easier and exciting."

Banks says her Hastings experience lead her, indirectly, to the career she loves best. "Everything I've done was connected and led up to what I am doing now. My first 'legal' job was a secretarial position, where I learned how to do legal research and writing. An unpaid student internship lead me to labor law. Labor law lead me to transit. Because of unpredictable chains of events, I encourage Hastings students to take advantage of every opportunity the College and life offer."

"I remember then-Professor Mary Kay Kane telling us in her 1979 Civil Procedure class at Hastings, 'Two things will happen to you in law school. You will change the way you think for the rest of your lives, and during your time here, you will make lifetime friends.' She was absolutely right. Law school changes the way you approach problems—forever. It teaches you to look at all sides of a problem, whether there are two, eight, or ten sides. And some of the best friends in my life have been the friends I've gone to law school with. There is something about the process that creates bonds that are not usually developed elsewhere."

Joel Richard Rubin ('75) says his entire family likes spending their summer vacations at the UCSB Alumni Association Vacation Center, a benefit available to all Hastings alums. Here he enjoys a swim with daughter Sandra during their 1995 stay. For more information about this alumni benefit, call the Family Vacation Center at 805-893-3123.

Alum in the News Carla Shapreau ('88)

Carla Shapreau, a partner at Crosby, Heafey, Roach & May who specializes in intellectual property and art law litigation, earned her way through Hastings, in part, by making violins. Now, she has carved out a niche for herself as an art law specialist, devoting a significant amount of her time to such matters.

Articles about her unusual specialty have appeared in newspapers including The Wall Street Journal, The Recorder, the Daily Journal, and the Los Angeles Times. Media attention began in October, 1994, when she was retained by UCLA to recover a stolen, or lost, 18th century Stradivarius violin that disappeared in 1967.

While working on this case, she learned of two others in the Court of Appeal that involved the issue of when a claim to recover stolen art accrues. One of the problems in recovering stolen art is that the stolen object typically surfaces in the hands of an innocent purchaser years after the theft, and it can be many years before the theft victim discovers the property's whereabouts. This raises statute of limitations issues. A 1982 amendment to the statute of limitations pertaining to actions to recover stolen art work and similar items specifies that a claim accrues three years after the theft victim discovers the location of the stolen object. Whether or not the discovery rule applies to thefts that predate the amendment was open to interpretation until early this year. Two cases, Naftzger v. American Numismatic Society, 42 Cal.App.4th 421 (1996) and Society of California Pioneers v. Baker, 43 Cal.App.4th 774 (1996), produced appellate court rulings that interpreted the law in a way that improved the odds for museums and other targets of theft for recovering long-lost art objects.

After being asked to write an amicus brief supporting the Society of California Pioneers' position, Ms. Shapreau contacted several museums statewide, including the San Francisco Fine Arts Museums, and volunteered to write an amicus brief on their behalf to argue that the discovery rule should be applied to delay accrual of claims to recover stolen art. Shapreau also filed an amicus brief supporting the American Numismatic Society's position. She says that she saw these two appeals as "an opportunity to let the court know how the museum community feels about the issue and to hopefully make new law."

She sees her pro bono work as the key to building a reputation in an area she enjoys. "You must be willing to put in extra time to do pro bono work in the areas that interest you. The extra time, hopefully, will result in other opportunities." Now, other attorneys are asking for help in art law cases, and Oxford University Press has asked her to contribute to a book involving art law issues in the area of violin commerce, such as fraud, forgery, and theft.

Thinking back on her years as a Hastings student, Shapreau says that Prof. Richard Cunningham and Prof. H.G. Prince served as her inspiration. "Professor Cunningham used a case involving a sunken Spanish galleon, the Atocha, to demonstrate a first-year property issue that was akin to the art law title battles I have recently been involved in. Who knows, representing treasure salvagers might be next."

Carla Shapreau's advice is, "If your work is not interesting and rewarding, it's not worth doing." She is shown here with one of her handcrafted violins.

YOU NEVER WRITE, YOU NEVER CALL

Just like Mom, we'd like to know what you've been up to lately. Use this convenient form to update us on your activities, and we'll include it in our Class Notes section in an upcoming issue of Hastings Community.

Even if you're not into show-and-tell, we could use the data to update our alumni records. In particular, we need information about your professional emphasis. This comes in handy when we are asked for referrals from other attorneys and to assist us in matching students with prospective alumni mentors. Or we may just want to invite you to something of special interest to you. You never know.

Return this form to: Hastings Community
